

The current Indiana law has worked very effectively during the past several months. Weakening the law by allowing banks, etc. to contact us unsolicited will be a step backward in assuring us privacy from unsolicited intrusions by phone solicitors. It has certainly been enjoyable to be able to "NOT be interrupted in the evenings" with various phone solicitations. Don't modify something that is working. Let the Indiana law stand.